

The CRX07 inaugural conference builds clinical research profession – August 2007

The inaugural conference for building the clinical research profession - Clinical Research Excellence 2007, was launched and held in Melbourne on the weekend of 17-19 August 2007.

Delegates left the conference with valuable tools to expand their ability to practise high quality research and obtained first-hand practise knowledge on the Global trends affecting the industry.

"The conference builds on Nucleus Network's commitment to grow the clinical research community and its efforts to collaborate with key stakeholders to build clinical research platforms for excellence for Australian Clinical Research Professionals in the Industry", Robyn Lichter, Education and Training Manager states. The conference brought together leading medical, clinical and allied health professionals including internationally recognized speakers to achieve even greater national and international recognition for Australia's excellence in clinical research

Please visit the conference website www.crx07.com for information on the conference.